

NOVOTHELIUM

Two UTSA alumni, Bianca Cerqueira, Ph.D. and Lauren Cornell, M.S. took on the battle against breast cancer. Their biotechnology start-up company, NovoThelium, is developing a bioengineered human scaffold that allows mastectomy patients to regenerate a nipple from their own cells, maintaining projection, natural pigmentation, and improved sensation. The SBDC Technology Commercialization Center assisted NovoThelium with their SBIR Grant applications and various competitions. NovoThelium landed among the top six contestants at the Rice Business Challenge. They also took first place at the Venture Challenge Competition and the Texas Venture Labs Investment Competition, which provided them the opportunity to ring the opening NASDAQ stock market bell in New York City in August 2017. And, they earned a spot among the top 10 national finalists at the Small Business Administration InnovateHER Challenge, which highlights products and services that have a measurable impact on the lives of women. Over 3,000 entrepreneurs competed nationally.
